

OIL AND GAS DEVELOPMENT IN GUYANA

Featured Speaker

The Honorable Dominic Gaskin

Minister of Business, Co-operative Republic of Guyana

Tuesday, February 26, 2019

10:00 am – Noon

REGISTER NOW

James A. Baker III Hall

Rice University

Guyana's oil and gas prospects have the potential to transform both the country and the international oil companies developing these resources. First production from Guyana's offshore Liza field is expected in 2020, and full development could yield 500,000 barrels per day. With billions of dollars in expected annual oil revenues, Guyana will have the opportunity to spur substantial economic and social development. However, the government and industry investment requirements to bring the oil to market and provide infrastructure to support this development will be massive.

At this event, the Honorable Dominic Gaskin, the Minister of Business of the Co-operative Republic of Guyana, will discuss opportunities for oil, gas and infrastructure development in Guyana. Following his address, a panel of experts from Guyana's government and the international oil industry will further explore oil and gas prospects.

This event is sponsored by the Baker Institute Center for Energy Studies with support from Bank of America Merrill Lynch and assistance from Hughes, Fields & Stoby (USA) PLLC, TOTALTEC Oilfield Services and Relocating2Guyana.

Admission is free, but registration is required to attend this event.

RSVP on the web at www.bakerinstitute.org/events/1990 before Friday, February 22.

Follow @BakerInstitute on Twitter and join the conversation online with #BakerEnergy.